March 20, 2017

Greetings! Perhaps you are wondering what we are doing here, since the march has occurred. Well hello. We are here to tell you.

The Organizing Committee for the Womxn’s March on Seattle is proud to have mobilized 175,000 people on January 21, 2017. Since then, we have received hundreds of requests for more information on how to continue this movement toward justice and equality for all. We’re happy to say that we will become a formal regional branch of the National Women’s March on Washington (MWM) registered as a nonprofit 501c4 in Seattle.

We call this new endeavor Seattle Womxn Marching Forward (SWMF). In addition to supporting the mission of the WMW (https://www.womensmarch.com/mission/), we created our own guiding mission and organizing structure.

Our mission is as follows:

We are womxn committed to improving the lives of all within our community. We will support non-profit organizations that are working with communities impacted by the current administration by: providing the resources necessary for people to connect with one another; creating accomplices by promoting the intersections and respect of all cultures and histories; and encouraging equity and social justice in this country.

Our website, https://seattlewomxnmarchingforward.org/, has information about who we are, what we do, how to reach us, and more. From this point on, the Seattle Womxn Marching Forward Facebook group will focus on the mission, activities, endeavors, and events of the Seattle Womxn Marching Forward organization. It is our goal to make sure that you are able to engage in meaningful, fulfilling volunteer and advocacy work. We will keep you updated, inspired, and informed every step of the way as we fight for justice and peace in these difficult times.

Our first official event as a group will be at Seattle Town Hall in May – details forthcoming.
